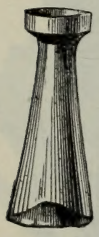
The Hyacinth.

For forcing should be planted in five or six inch pots or in flats, in rich light earth, and put away in some cool, dark place to form roots. This requires from six weeks to two months, when the most forward can be brought out and placed in a gentle heat.

Forcing in Glasses.

The bulbs should be procured and placed in glasses as early in the season as possible, keeping them in the dark until their roots are well started. The water in which they grow should be changed once every week.

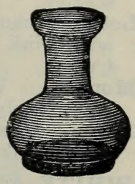


Hyacinth Glasses.

Tye's Hyacinth Glass. Furnished in the following colors: green, purple, blue. 18c. each, $1.75 per doz.

Tall Hyacinth Glass in green, purple, blue. 15c. each, $1.50 per dozen.

Patent Hyacinth Glass. This is in two parts, the inner contains the bulb and roots, and can be removed without injuring them, to refill with water. 25c. each, $2.50 per dozen.



Out-Door Culture.

Hyacinths may be planted in the open ground any time from the beginning of September, or until the frost has rendered the soil impenetrable.

When the bed has been dug thoroughly the bulbs may then be planted from six to eight inches apart and four or five inches deep.

As soon as the frost has set in, a covering of three or four inches of short manure, straw or hay, should be placed over the beds, but not until the ground is frozen quite hard, as vermin are apt to take refuge in the covering, and in the absence of a crust on the soil will destroy many of the bulbs during the Winter.

Roman Hyacinths.

For forcing, the Roman Hyacinth should be potted as soon as obtainable, as they are more delicate than the Dutch bulbs, and impaired by excessive drying. For out-door culture they require a little more protection than the Dutch Hyacinths.

Narcissus or Daffodils.

The Narcissus is a very attractive genus of early blooming flowers, including the well-known Daffodil and Jonquil. Most of the varieties are hardy and the bulbs should be planted in the Autumn like the Hyacinth, but may remain in the ground a number of years, although they will become so matted together in time as to make a division of them necessary.

The single Narcissus is extremely hardy and popular as a border flower, and the central cup of a different color from the six petals, makes the flower very attractive. Some have the petals of a lemon color, and the cup orange; others have the petals white, and the cup yellow; while others are large rich golden yellow trumpet shaped flowers and petals. The double varieties are much prized. The common Daffodil is well known under that name, though not so well by its true one, Von Sion.

A beautiful portion of the Narcissus family, however, is the Polyanthus. The flowers are produced in clusters or trusses, of half a dozen to three times this number, but are not hardy.
